Department of Global Civil, Environmental, Mobility Engineering

Our Department encompasses three major disciplines: Civil Engineering, Environmental Engineering, and Transportation Engineering. This interdisciplinary approach ensures that our educational offerings meet the modern demands of smart cities and smart infrastructure. The program integrates various elements essential for developing futuristic smart cities, including smart construction, digitalization of infrastructure, 3D spatial information systems, carbon neutrality, smart water management, renewable energy, autonomous driving, mobility services, and smart logistics.

Our objective is to cultivate professionals who are pivotal in the construction and maintenance of infrastructure, environmental management, transportation, and logistics. These fields are crucial for building and sustaining safe, convenient, and pleasant cities. Our program focuses on nurturing engineers with a balanced and holistic approach, both academically and practically. We aim to foster well-rounded individuals who possess specialized knowledge in their respective fields and can apply creative thinking and interdisciplinary approaches to solve urban societal problems while fulfilling their social responsibilities.

In addition to the core disciplines within the department, we offer courses that incorporate cutting-edge, data-driven technologies such as AI and digital twins, fostering the development of multidisciplinary talents.

▷ Students will develop a strong foundation in the principles and practices of civil, environmental, and transportation engineering.
▷ The program also aims to develop global leaders capable of integrating new technologies such as IoT, AI, and big data to support the development of smart cities.
▷ By bridging civil, environmental, and transportation engineering, the program fosters a holistic perspective, enabling students to design and implement solutions that consider both technical and societal impacts.
▷ Graduates of this program will be well-prepared for diverse career paths in government agencies and industries focused on infrastructure development and management, environmental sustainability, and transportation planning and management, among others.
▷ This program is ideal for students who are passionate about building and maintaining well-balanced, well-planned urban systems—encompassing infrastructure, environmental, and transportation systems—to support a high quality of human life.
