교과목 교육목표 (Course Objectives)	This course is designed to sharpen students ability to read, write, and think critically. Through spirited class discussion and frequent writing assignments, students will develop these crucial skills, which will stand them in good stead not only in other literature classes they might take, but also in all courses in a variety of disciplines that call for critical thinking and writing.
교과목개요 (Course Description)	This course will introduce students to American and British fiction and various literary devices and terms foundational to literary analysis, including plot, character, setting, symbol, tone, and theme. The works selected for study raise compelling questions not only about the forms of literature, but also about what literature has to say about our world and our humanity, about the way humans live or have lived or the ways they ought to live. This class will be taught in-person, which is subject to change based on the university guidelines for COVID-19.
